

"Elizabeth" Is Strong Meat for Eighth Avenue

Paula Glacometti's Tragedy Affords Nance O'Neil a Role Which Suits Her Well.

Death and history were dealt out generously by Nance O'Neil at the Grand Opera-House last night. In all her past and present storming of New York this lady actress has not appeared in a role which suited her so well as does that of the high-tempered, head-colting Queen of England in Paula Glacometti's tragedy, of "Elizabeth." The play was pretty strong, not to say blood-raw meat, for Eighth Avenue, which has a decided preference for candy and comedy—but Miss O'Neil, at least, enjoyed it and attacked it with savage relish.

While her power was chiefly being power, alternated with marked borrowing in her quieter moments, she showed she had studied certain phases of Elizabeth's intelligence. She over-emphasized the harsh and cruel side of the character and failed when occasional tender touches were demanded, but the duplicity of the woman was rather well brought out, and it must be confessed she played beautifully and often. She spared herself no more than others in her rage. Her penchant for posing was indulged, as usual, her final setting for this pastime being an immense pile of purple cushions in the center of the stage, whereon the Queen died hard.

Couldn't Restrain Herself. She began the last act with ghastly whimpers, but she couldn't resist the temptation to bring back her voice before death rang down the curtain. Her make-up from the first made her look as bloodless as Elizabeth's deeds were bloody; the anemic effect being heightened by a red wig, which won a laugh all for itself when the wearer asked the Earl of Essex: "By the way, how do you like the way I dress my hair?" Dalton Was Good. Although Charles Dalton, as the Earl, brought the performance to a painful halt at one point by forgetting his lines, he threw the star completely into the shade by the splendid manner in which he carried off the scene where the victorious warrior rises against the studied slight and denial of reward by his sovereign. A valiant figure, and his voice ringing full and true in a rush of bitter eloquence, Mr. Dalton moved the audience to the greatest applause of the evening. They wanted him, and he should have been allowed to take a curtain call by himself—but he wasn't.

McLELLAN TO GREET KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS.

The State Convention of the Knights of Columbus will be held at Hotel Astor next Tuesday and Wednesday. Mayor McClellan will welcome the delegates and the State Deputy, Francis D. Thorne, will preside over the convention.

All the seats in Lyric Theatre have been reserved for the delegates and their friends for Tuesday evening. About one thousand persons will be in attendance at Hotel Astor. John P. O'Brien will act as toastmaster, and among the speakers will be Corporation Counsel John J. Delany, Justice Victor J. Dowling, Judge Kennefick, of Buffalo; John W. Hogan, of Syracuse, and Francis D. Thorne, of Brooklyn.

BLUE DRESS MADE BROWN

More home dyeing is done every year with Diamond Dyes. It is so simple and economical. For example: To change the color of a dress from blue to the style, dark brown or a dark green, use dark brown dye; dark green dye makes bottle green; yellow dye makes green; green dye makes peacock green, and so on.

Diamond Dyes

can be used in surprisingly many ways about the home. The Diamond Dye Annual will tell you some things you never knew. Write for it. Sent free on request, together with a sample dyed cloth. Address: DIAMOND DYES, Burlington, Vt.

EX-POLICEMAN A TAMER OF REFRACTORY ROUNDAMEN.

Vose Issues a Call for All Oppressed Patrolmen to Flock to Him, Promising Relief.

Come, all you tired and oppressed and outcast policemen, and list to the balm that awaits you.

Charles A. Vose, once a policeman himself, who knows about all of the woes of the burdened "cop," has advertised for all of those who are weary and heavy laden to call on him at No. 741 Broadway, Brooklyn, and he'll put them on the track of happiness and content. His specialty is the taming of roundamen. He guarantees so to domesticate them that they will walk right up and eat out of the hand of the garden variety "cop."

Vose has a specific grievance against Roundamen Fitzgibbon, of the Fifty-first Precinct, Brooklyn. Vose resigned from the force last March while on duty before Deputy Police Commissioner Farrell on charges made by Fitzgibbon. The day before Vose had N. C. C., $25,000; Piedmont College, Dem. made charges against Fitzgibbon, which were dismissed.

When Vose left the force, he says, he made up his mind to devote a lot of his life to the taming of roundamen.
